The Independence March

On 26 September 2023, Narodowy Bank Polski is putting into circulation a silver coin “The Independence March”, with a face value of 10 złoty.

The history of this cyclical event dates back to the year 2010. It was an exceptional time when Poles were trying to – if only for a moment – unite around the Smoleńsk tragedy and its victims. However, soon afterwards feuding and disputes broke out over the choice of a burial site for the presidential couple.

The first Independence March proceeded through the streets of Warsaw on 11 November 2010. The event has been organised ever since to commemorate people and events that had led to the rebirth of Poland in 1918.

The Independence March has become a cyclical and the largest patriotic manifestation in Poland, reaching the steady turnout of over 100,000. In 2018, when Poland celebrated the 100th anniversary of regaining independence, over 250,000 Poles of all ages joined the march, coming with white-and-red flags. Polish President Andrzej Duda delivered an address at the start of the manifestation, and the march trailed the official one attended by the state authorities who walked to the National Stadium. Every year participants march under different slogans; for example, in 2016 it was – “Poland: A Bastion of Europe”, in 2017 – “We Want God” and in 2018 – “God, Honour, Homeland”.

The Independence March has become one of the exceptional events on the map of contemporary history of Poland, indicating the need to show respect towards national heritage and love for the homeland.
